BRISTOL RESIDENTS MAKING HISTORY AS THEY PILE SCRAP METAL AND RUBBER HIGHER AND HIGHER; DRIVE ENDS OCT. 12

Drive Resumed Here; Heaps of Scrap Again Appear On Streets

INTEREST RUNS HIGH

Question Now is How Many Tons Over Quota Will Be Secured

They're at it again! Those air-raid wardens and emergency police of Bristol.

They have started the second round-up of metal scrap and scrap rubber, and are determined to build Bristol's Victory Scrap Pile higher and higher.

Can they do it?

Sure! If they have your help.

The official tabulation of the scrap turned in last night had not been completed in time for publication today.

The finance committee for the Bristol Victory Scrap Drive held its first meeting last evening in the McCrory building, with Chairman Edgar Spencer presiding.

Plans are already under way for the sale and disposal of the two large piles of scrap metal and rubber. Proceeds of the sale are to go toward purchase of equipment for the emergency police and air-raid wardens of Bristol borough.

Heaps of scrap are again appearing along the curb lines in Bristol and ward groups are being re-organized to collect this material.

Bristol's quota of 300 tons, at first was thought to be a staggering amount. But in the first week approximately 251 tons were heaved into the pile.

The question now being asked is: "How many tons more than the quota will Bristol collect?"

The campaign ends here on the night of October 12th. This gives just four nights, excluding Saturday and Sunday nights to finish the drive.

So let's get going on the final round-up. Bristol has already made history in this drive, but there are yet new chapters to be written during the remainder of the campaign.

Will you help?

Tonight the sixth ward will again go to bat and an appeal is made for three or four trucks, and the workers

CHAIN OF AIRDROMES NOW LEADS FROM ATLANTIC COAST TO BACKDOOR OF EGYPT

By Frederick Smith

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Oct. 8.—(INS)—American bombers are now able to fly direct across the South Atlantic, land for overhaul and refueling on the West African Coast and then go on to their battle stations in Egypt.

This is only possible after many months of toil in which the RAF, aided by American technicians and engineers, have completed a chain of airdromes out of the swamp and steam-heated bush country of West Africa, leading from the Atlantic coast to the backdoor of Egypt.

This great chain of airdromes commenced with the building of a marine base for flying-boats on the African coast to deal with the growing menace of U-boats in the South Atlantic.

The work was hard for supplies were difficult to obtain. A ship's lifeboat fitted with an engine from an army truck was improvised as an aircraft tender, brown wrapping paper was used for oil-pipe jointing, lubri-

"READING IS ACTUALLY THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR ABOUT TEACHING ALL SUBJECTS," SAYS EDUCATOR

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 8.—"Gone is the day when a teacher says, 'I teach history, the woman next door teaches reading,'" Dr. Roma Gans, of the Teachers College of Columbia University, told a group of elementary school teachers here, Tuesday, at a session of the Bucks County Teachers Institute.

"When you teach history, geography or any other subject, you are teaching reading on a big scale," Dr. Gans declared. "Reading is actually the most important factor about teaching all subjects."

The well-known educator, who addressed another Institute group Tuesday morning in Quakertown, prefaced her remarks on "Teaching Reading Effectively," by making a plea for Pennsylvanians to awaken to the fact that the district plan of fixing salaries is woefully inadequate. "Something has to be done about the teacher in the lower income bracket," she declared. "It should not be necessary for a teacher in this great state of Pennsylvania to move around from place to place to better herself. A teacher is part of the community and should be paid according to her worth and increasing value. Of course the teacher must be well trained."

"We as teachers must be very much alive to our own needs, alert to our professional advantages. We must see it as a part of our job that our schools in these war days remain well-staffed, and this we can do by playing a part, side by side with the board of education in planning the educational facilities for our communities."

"We cannot blame many of our teachers in the lower salary brackets who are going into defense industry, especially here in Pennsylvania, where there is something wrong with the system of rating teachers."

Continuing her comments on "teaching reading effectively," Dr. Gans said that "wherever you are teaching you are dealing in the field of reading."

She also said that in many instances the libraries and some homes have made a better job of teaching reading than the teachers in some of the elementary schools.

"We have adult schools, mind you, where reading is being taught to men and women who have had 12 years of reading in public schools," she said.

The speaker denounced compulsory book reviews in some of the schools as a curse.

Dr. Gans' point-program suggested to the elementary group were as follows: "All reading should be a happy experience."

"Teaching of reading must be personal."

"Help in reading must be correctly timed."

"Have a tremendous amount of varied material available."

"Proper evaluation of the child as a reader."

Dr. Gans told the teachers that using reading as a punishment is "absolutely worthless."

She advised teachers to assist the children in selecting the books they like.

The speaker said that a teacher with over 30 pupils in the first grade, has a major problem that is hard to meet.

She declared "it is very unsound for a

80 TEACHERS ARE REGISTERED HERE FOR AN INSTITUTE

Sectional Sessions Conducted For Seven School Districts Yesterday

DR. GANS SPEAKS

Reading is Basis for Most of the Discussions of the Day

Eighty teachers from this area registered yesterday when a Sectional County Institute was held in Bristol high school. These sessions and similar ones held in other parts of the county are taking the place of the usual county institute this year, this method being decided upon due to tire and gasoline rationing.

Teachers of public schools in Bristol borough, Bristol township, Morrisville, Falls Township, Hulmeville, Bensalem township, and Tullytown attended the two programs, morning and afternoon.

Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of Bristol public schools, welcomed the group in the morning, following registration at nine o'clock.

The program of the morning, starting at 9.15, included: Panel discussion, "Teaching the Social Studies," Miss Genevieve Bowen, elementary supervisor of Bucks County schools; illustrated talk, "Art in the Elementary Grades," Miss Victoria Bedford, representative of an art company.

Luncheon was served in the cafeteria under direction of domestic science teachers of Bristol borough and township, with girls of those departments serving the tempting menu.

Getting underway at 1.30, the afternoon program opened with an address of greeting, by Mrs. Margaret Seylor, president of Bucks Co. Teachers Association; address "Teaching Reading Effectively," Dr. Roma Gans, of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York.

Group meetings opened at three o'clock, based on reading, and conducted by the following reading experts: Mrs. Gladys Foster, Miss Eve Gray, Miss Kathleen Wise, Miss Neva Reeves.

Over 200 teachers took an active part in planning and conducting the annual institute which was conducted in six of Bucks County's boroughs Tuesday and yesterday. This was the largest number of local participants ever to participate since the Institute was established around 1854.

In 1941 the 40 teachers planned and conducted the program.

Dr. Harold Hand, of the University of Maryland, and Dr. Gans were two nationally known experts who assisted in the programs. Dr. Ruth Fedder and Miss Genevieve Bowen assisted by scores of teachers, planned and carried out the programs.

High school students participated in panel discussions in which they had ample opportunity to present the needs of modern youths. The high school teachers' meetings at Sellersville-Perkasie and Morrisville were in the nature of a one day work conference, a complete departure from the well known inspirational institutes. The high school teachers listened to the needs of modern youths, from the youths themselves as well as from Dr. Hand. The teachers then met in very small groups to discuss the implications of the needs and problems of

NO WITCH HUNTS

In this war, at least until recently, this nation happily had been quite free from the self-constituted spy hunter, who believes himself more competent than any government official to judge the true motives of a suspected person. But, according to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that situation is changing for the worse.

Addressing the annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police in New York recently, Mr. Hoover said that "increasingly, 'catching spies' has become the desire of many untrained and unequipped individuals." As a means of offsetting those who would spout forth wild accusations, which, when examined, would be found wanting in substance, Mr. Hoover urges enforcement officials to be cautious and absolutely accurate in making public announcements.

"The maintenance of our internal security," he said, "is too sacred a trust to permit it to be used by psychopathic political hopefuls as a catapult to bold headlines. Countering the activities of the domestic enemies is effective only when they are under constant surveillance, their sources of information controlled and their communications supervised."

Mr. Hoover also offered some wise advice against distrusting persons because of their racial background.

"It should not be forgotten that our nation has been formed of many races and nationalities," he said. "Professional law enforcement must not permit itself to be misled by emotion-guided or gossip-minded individuals to acts of nuisance and oppression against persons merely because of a foreign background. Let us be guided by facts and facts alone. The nation need have no fear that professional law enforcement will be moved by surges of personal prejudice and selfish motives."

In fighting the Axis with all its evils, the nation must guard against the appearance of amateur detectives, witch hunters and character-smashing "spy" chasers. If there is anything worse than a Gestapo, that would be it.

Limiting all incomes in this country to $25,000 a year would mean confiscation of enough money to run the war for four days and ten hours—and most of the strategists think it will last longer than that.

When Harold Ickes admits that he's optimistic about something, the rest of the country might as well throw off all restraints.

The sixth ward gathered 78 tons last Thursday night which set a mark for the other districts. Since that, however, the other wards have been rounding up additional scrap and this means that the sixth ward will have to again make a good showing if they are to maintain the leadership.

All residents of the sixth ward are asked to have their scrap out not later than six o'clock.

old piece of printing machinery. The press was offered to the fourth ward workers and they very readily accepted it as a means of boosting their tonnage. The press was made of the very kind of scrap metal so badly needed to keep the steel mills going.

Last night a crew of men, members of the demolition squad which includes the fourth sector, started work in the basement of the Courier building to dismantle the press. Four men worked in the basement and three men outside to load the truck as pieces of the broken machine were hauled through the basement windows.

In dismantling the press the wrecking crew found the hardest kind of work in breaking up the frame-work on which was mounted the bed of the press and over which a big cast-iron cylinder with a heavy steel top plate passed. Some of the machine could be unbolted, but much of it had to be broken apart with sledge. The work was completed in 2½ hours.

The Bucks County Gazette started publication August 14, 1873, and was sold at sheriff's sale to The Bristol Courier in 1923. Publication was discontinued December 31, 1926.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

The Rollar Building where Mary Driscoll, a newspaper reporter, shared a studio with Peggy Hudson, an interior decorator, was old and snabby. Prosperous tenants with the exception of Peggy and Jan Grant, the pianist—had long since moved to newer buildings. Peggy had taken advantage of reduced rents and leased the entire fifth floor which she turned into a studio-apartment. Then came the management's edict, "No living on the premises and lights out at 9 P.M." The order was ignored by all but Jan, who took an apartment in a nearby hotel. At dinnertime there was a certain excitement in preparing hearts behind locked doors but after Mr. Grant, the superintendent, switched out the lights at nine o'clock, the halls were black and menacing. There were sinister noises that began after everyone was in bed, and often Mary was sure she heard a woman sobbing. Mary told Peggy and threatened to leave, but the latter just laughed at her, so Mary stayed. That's how Girl in the Green Coat, whom Mary loved in vain, came back into her life at the end of his. It was February 5th. Mary had covered a movie for the drama editor, accompanied by George and Alline Evans, and returned home shortly after midnight. Having forgotten her flashlight, she hoped that Jan would be in his studio on the second floor to accompany her the other three, dark nights. Mary tells the story.

CHAPTER THREE

He was nearly always there at night, sometimes alone, practicing, but more often there would be two or three others sitting around talking or listening to Jan play. And, though he was meticulous about keeping the new rules and wouldn't even sleep there nor cooked there as he used to, the lexbox was still kept well stocked with materials for midnight snacks. If anyone was there, there would be highballs and sandwiches, or sometimes scrambled eggs and coffee.

So tonight, as I came to that familiar landing, I stopped to listen to the piano and even snuffed to see if I could smell coffee. I took a few steps down the corridor, intending to go as far as Jan's door, to make sure.

And then, suddenly, I was scared, so scared that I couldn't have cried out my run to save my life. I was just rooted to the spot with unreasonable, primitive terror. I didn't hear a thing, but I knew that I was not alone in that long, narrow hall. I knew as well as if I had seen it that there was someone, or something, waiting there, watching me. I don't know what kept me from running the few remaining steps and flinging myself, gaunt and pounding, onto Jan's door. My guardian angel, I guess. But I couldn't move. I just stood there, shaking, and after a while I turned my head, very very slowly, and I saw what I had not noticed before—a pale streak of light coming from the partly open door of the vacant studio opposite Jan's. The vacant studios were always kept closed and locked, but this one was open, the street light from outside shining wavy on the floor. And as I watched, too terrified to move, that little wedge of light narrowed. Someone was in there, pushing the door shut.

I think I made some sort of choking, squawking sound, and then I ran, stumbling and crashing into the railings at the turns, up those three flights of stairs to our rooms. Once in our own hall, I managed to pull myself together enough to turn the key in the lock and bolt the door behind me. Even then, safe in our warm, lamp-lit living room, with the hall door locked behind me and the reassuring sound of good old Peg's comfortable breathing in the room beyond, I stood there gasping and shaking, too weak to take another step.

Peg went right on sleeping peacefully, I dropped into one of the low, fat chairs, feeling a little foolish. Maybe I had imagined it. I hadn't imagined the open door into the vacant front studio, and I saw it swing closed, but maybe I imagined the breathing. Maybe I heard myself breathing. Maybe I breathing hard enough right now, maybe Mr. Grant left the window open to air the come up here? We never kept any money in the place, and we hadn't any jewelry. Who would bother us, a couple of none-too-beautiful working girls, not bothering anybody?

Then I thought somebody was trying the doorknob. I was practically sure somebody was trying the doorknob. Of course the door was bolted from the inside, but still there was somebody out there, trying to get in. I was positive of it.

I turned on the light. I read somewhere that if you turn on a light the prowler knows you are awake and goes away.

I sat up in bed and strained every nerve to listen. Peg went right on sleeping. It was all I could do to keep from waking her, out of sheer studio and the breeze from the open window.

Except that Mr. Grant was never known to forget anything, and, besides, if the window was open, maybe someone climbed in from the fire escape. Climbed in a front, second-story window, right on Post street! Very likely. Very likely, indeed!

The picture of somebody climbing in a front window on a brightly lighted street was too much even for me. Maybe it was somebody escaping out of the window. I toyed with that idea.

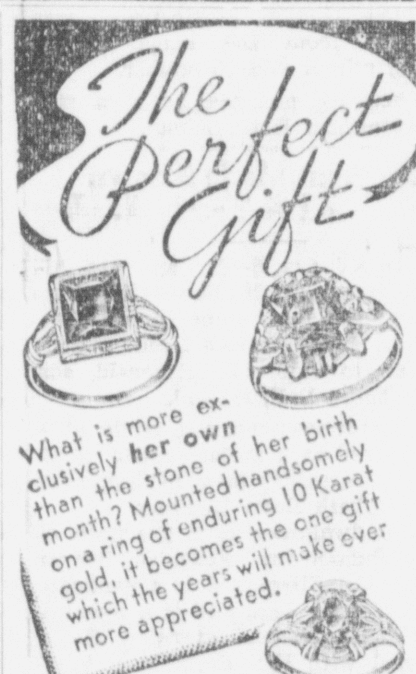

Anyway, I'm going to move, I thought, lying back on the down cushions, beginning to relax at last. I'm going to tell Peg in the morning. I'm going to get out of here. Yes, and go where? Back to a two-by-four apartment all by myself? Who, except the good-natured, hard-sleeping Peg, would put up with me and my irregular newspaper hours? And as for getting married, whom did I want to marry? And, for that matter, who wanted to marry me?

I thought back over the places where I had lived in the last few years since I had been alone. I thought of all the girls who envied my place here with Peggy.

Still troubled, I got into bed and turned off the reading light. Then I thought I heard steps on the stairs. Don't be silly, why would anyone

THERE was a dream — that men could one day speak the thoughts of their own choosing. There was a hope — that men could one day stroll through streets at evening unafraid. There was a prayer — that each could speak to his own God — in his own church. That dream, that hope, that prayer became America! Great strength, youthful heart, vast enterprise, hard work made it so. Now that same America is the dream — the hope — the prayer of the world. Our freedom — its dream. Our strength — its hope. Our swift race against time — its prayer! We must not fail the world now. We must not fail to share our freedom with it — afterwards. Keep Slugging. Keep Working. and Fight for America!

"Reading Is Actually The Most Important Factor About Teaching"

1942 civilization to have classes that are too large."

Dr. Gans told teachers if they have a one-book room they might as well close it up for it don't pay to carry on teaching under such circumstances.

"In selecting books, fit them to suit the children," she advised. "Too many schools have too many old books or too few new ones. Throw the old books out, they are no good whatsoever. The reading material should be of the very best and the latest. Clean out all the trash, especially the old text books. Throw away the old maps and the old globes of worlds that do not exist."

"I have recently heard of school communities who have decided to not purchase any new books for the duration of the war—how horrible," Dr. Gans remarked.

The speaker in her closing remarks told the teachers that if they don't have fun reading and teaching reading to the children, the children will not benefit a bit by their teaching.

Group meetings followed Dr. Gans' talk, when reading specialists from four well-known New York publishing companies presented programs to the teachers.

Wise Wives Select Food With Care

Breakfast Is Roll and Coffee Look Out For Lunch and Dinner

It's a wise homemaker who selects her foods carefully and prepares them so well that the whole family can hardly wait to be served, says Inez S. Willson, home economist. The old story of eating because "it's good for you" isn't much fun, but a meal that really tastes good is often full of vitamins, minerals and all the other nutrients we need. Don't be too critical, especially if someone other than yourself prepares the food you eat—but just make one of those silent surveys and figure what you're getting, or maybe what you're not getting in your diet.

It may be easy to start the day with a sweet roll and coffee, but if that's your habit look out for lunch and dinner. Every man, woman and child needs food for energy, food to build and repair body tissue and food to regulate the body processes. Of course, age, activity and other factors affect the kinds and quantities we need, but there are several foods essential for the health of each member of the family, regardless of age or occupation.

Two Kinds of Energy Food

There are two kinds of energy foods: carbohydrates (sugars and starches) and fats. Carbohydrates or starches and sugars, can easily be identified because they're found in all fruits and vegetables. Although the amounts do vary from vegetable to vegetable and from one fruit to another, there are often minerals and vitamins present in the foods which make up for the lack of sugar or starch. The fats are recognizable, too, and supply essential nutrients in addition to being energy foods. For example, vitamin A is found in butter, especially in summer butter, and is rich in the essential unsaturated fatty acids which are needed for growth and healthy skin.

Proteins Needed for Growth

Foods rich in protein are needed for growth and for the repair of muscles and tissues of the body. These include the animal proteins—meat, fish, milk, eggs and cheese, and the cereal proteins.

Meat is an important food because it is the chief source of protein in the average diet. For this reason, a generous amount should be served daily to aid in growth and the building processes of children and for repairing processes in the adult. Its importance in the diet is recognized by the fact that it is one of the basic foods of our armed forces.

Minerals and Vitamins Needed

But the picture is not complete if we are only to include energy foods and foods for growth and building and repairing body tissue. Minerals and vitamins are needed by the body—calcium and phosphorus for bones and teeth, and iron for rich red blood. Milk is our chief source of calcium and is our best source of iron. Phosphorus is found in both. Liver is the richest source of iron, but all lean meats provide a generous supply of iron and phosphorus.

Liver is also a very good source of vitamin A and lean pork is the richest source of thiamine or B1. Fresh fruits and raw vegetables supply vitamin C, while fish oils, liver, butter, eggs and fortified milk supply vitamin D.

Eat the Right Food Daily

Nutritionists recognize the fact that most foods contribute more than one nutrient to the diet and with this information in mind, have set up a yardstick by which we can measure our own diets and see just how good our food habits really are. We are told that in our meals every day we should include at least one or more servings of lean meat, poultry or fish, a pint of milk (more for children), one egg (or at least three or four per week), one or more servings of potatoes, two or more servings of vegetables (green or yellow often), two or more servings of fruit (citrus fruits or tomatoes often), cereals and bread (at least half should be whole wheat or enriched), and fats and sweets as desired.

SEPTEMBER MEALS

It's patriotic to find our fun close at hand this year. And even if we can't recline in the shade along the shore, it's possible to keep cool, comfortable, healthy and happy right at home. The meals we eat can contribute much to our comfort, says Inez S. Willson, home economist. It's a great help to the homemaker who knows that September is a month of plenty when there can be almost unlimited variety in menus. Here's a suggestion for a really good late summer menu: A rolled veal roast, served with potato chips, corn on the cob, mixed vegetable salad and cantaloupe or watermelon.

The veal roast is easy to prepare and is delicious served hot or cold.

Rolls Veal Roast

Purchase a three to four pound rolled veal roast.

To Roast: Place it on a rack in an open roasting pan. Insert a meat thermometer so the bulb reaches the center of the meat. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast at 300 degrees F. until the thermometer registers 170 degrees F. or done for veal.

Willkie Comments on Statement of Russia's Needs

Moscow—Wendell L. Willkie, in a special statement to the Tass News Agency today, declared that he hoped "Stalin's statement (on Soviet needs) for the United Nations to Russia."

Willkie referred to Josef Stalin's Oct. 1 declaration that Allied aid had far been little effective, and calling for the United Nations "to fulfill obligations fully and on time." Stalin termed the second front of "first importance."

"That also was my aim in the statement of my personal views, which I made in Moscow," Willkie told the Soviet news agency.

Here are TWO WAYS to help win!

You Can Win

A $25 War Savings Bond

BY WRITING 25 WORDS OR LESS,
JUST FILL IN THIS SENTENCE:

"My family is drinking more milk today because"

• You know what War Savings Bonds can do to help win the war. But do you know that family health is also important to our Victory program? Be sure you follow correct nutritional rules—including plenty of milk.

Milk provides many vitamins and minerals to aid working efficiency. And it also helps reduce those wartime nerves that come from today's living under wartime pressure. For milk contains several times as much calcium as any other common food—in readily assimilable form. This all-important mineral regulates the irritability of tissue and relaxes muscles.

Thousands of families are drinking more milk to help build up health. You may win a $25 War Savings Bond by finishing the above sentence, outlining why you think this is important today.

An easy way to get your family to like milk is to serve SuppLee Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin D Milk. Tastes better and is better for the whole family. Order from your SuppLee milkman, your neighborhood store or phone Bristol 2117.

• On Thursdays, SuppLee brings you the Sealtest Show over KYW at 10 P. M. Tune in!

Bristol High Mentor Considers Hockey a Major Sport For High School

Although the transportation problem has caused the disbanding of the Lower Bucks County Girls' Hockey League, Coach Phyllis Kallenbach expects her Bristol High School girls to engage in a few games this season.

Coach Kallenbach has contacted the schools which are situated on the local bus line and if possible is attempting to arrange a schedule. The girls managers, Claire DiVincenzo and Ann Lewis, have written letters to the managers of the Bensalem and Langhorne teams requesting games.

Miss Kallenbach had 38 girls report for practice this season, one of the largest turnouts in years. The Bristol mentor is reluctant to drop hockey as she feels that it is considered a major sport both in high school and college.

The girls who have reported for practice are:

Seniors: Jean Burton, Georgetown Biggs, Elizabeth DeGregorio, Florence Napp, Isabella Zanni, Bettie Bachofer, Dorothy Stroble.

Juniors: Regina Doyle, Marion Luckhardt, Miriam Dewnap, Mabel Heath, and June Heath.

Sophomores: Sophie Bielecki, Betty Lebo, Vera Kwochka, Shirley Peet, Alice Moffo, Theresa Spezzano, Mary Bell, Mary Riebel, and Mary McLean.

Boy Scout Council Receives Favorable Financial Reports

Following dinner, the president, Walter W. Pitzonka, called the meeting to order and asked for a report on the council's finances. Mr. Lovett informed the Board that the council ended the fiscal year on September 30th well within its budget and that there was sufficient cash on hand to retire $1,000 of the camp bond issue as of November 1st. It was unanimously voted to do this and Mr. Weiss was requested to conduct a drawing of bond numbers for this purpose.

Judge Keller, reporting for the finance campaign, which is now in progress, stated that $4,831.60 had been received in cash and pledges which he stated he felt was very satisfactory in view of the fact that only a small fraction of the communities had completed their solicitation. He concluded his remarks by saying he was very grateful to note that not a single one of the larger contributors had cut his contributions this year and that in a great many cases, the smaller contributors had made considerable increases. President Pitzonka then asked for an expression of opinion as to the advisability of holding a final report or victory dinner, especially in view of the fact that no opening or intermediate report dinners had been held. Eight community chairmen who were present expressed various points of view and it was finally decided to canvass each community chairman by letter to find out how his workers felt about it. If the majority decide in favor of such a dinner, it will be held in Doylestown on Monday evening, October 26th.

Dr. Strathie, chairman of the camping and activities committee of the council, reported in some length on the recent summer season at camp, advising the men there had been 450 boy scouts and 162 girl scouts at camp. He stated that while operating expenses had been considerably higher than in former years, the camp operation had been held to within its budget. He commented on the fine work of Scoutmaster Chester A. Foulke of Quakertown and his scouts in painting all the buildings at camp last Spring and upon vote of the Board, the president was asked to write a letter to Mr. Foulke, expressing appreciation of his fine work. It was also voted to send a letter of appreciation to Mrs. Robert Goeller, wife of the Scout Executive, who conducted the Scout camp and to Mrs. L. Ivins Smith of New Hope who was largely responsible for organizing the attendance of the girl scouts. It was unanimously voted in view of the conduct and treatment of the girl scouts during the two weeks they were at camp that they be invited to use the camp during the coming season.

S. A. Miller, chairman of the council's training committee, reported briefly on the coming week-end training course at Camp Ockanickon, which starts at nine o'clock this Sunday morning, stating that four courses would be offered—troop camping, scoutmaster leadership, principles of scoutmasterhood and cubbing. Commodore Kemmerer reported for the senior scouting committee, and gave some details on the Chesapeake cruise in which some 30 seascouts participated from July 19th to 20th. He said that despite war-time restrictions, it had been one of the most successful cruises held and that they experienced three days of excellent sailing weather. He invited all the board members to be present, if possible, at the coming Seascout Ball and Bridge of Honor, which will be held at the Morrisville high school on Saturday, November 7th.

President Pitzonka reminded the men that the Scout Executive's contract expires on October 12th and it was the unanimous decision that Scout Executive Goeller be re-employed for another year. The concluding item of business was a brief report on the part of the Executive in which he informed the board that the membership of the council was holding up very well but that problems were constantly arising due to the fact that many scout leaders were employed in industries on night shifts and many of them were already in the service of our country. He complimented the board on the fine attendance of 25 men and stated that under present conditions, this was an exceptionally fine showing. He reported briefly on the request of Col. Churchill Williams for the Boy Scouts to organize a messenger corps and stated that plans had already been made and that the organization was under way.
